What We May Expect Between This Time and To-morrow Evening.

U. S. WEATHER BUREAU,
WASHINGTON, D. C., May 13, 1892.

Fair and slightly warmer.

The above forecasts are made for a period of thirty-six hours, ending at 6 o'clock to-morrow evening.

He grows under the coffee and he grumbles at the result.
He makes remarks about the bread his mother used to bake.
And makes the impression with his weary little wife that her cooking is the worst he ever tackled in his life.
But at noon he seeks the lunch-room and he takes a chunk of pie.
And struggles in a manner that brings moisture to his eyes.
He takes down the blue milk they laid to the best.
And inside his money to the clerk and never says a word.

DIFFICULTY NEAR LEWISBURG.

Richard Taylor and Arnett Graves Do Some Shooting and Cutting.

Richard Taylor and Arnett Graves got into a difficulty about 11 o'clock yesterday morning, which resulted in Graves being shot three times with a 32-caliber pistol in the hands of Taylor—once in the left side, once in the neck and once in the back. The shots in the side and neck were not very serious.

Dr. Duhys cut the ball from his side. Just how serious the wound in the back may prove to be he cannot tell, as he thought it advisable not to probe for the ball much on account of the position of it.

Taylor was shot in the chin and received other ugly wounds about the head.

There were no witnesses to the affray, which took place about three miles East of Lewisburg on the old Allison Culver farm.

It was learned that the parties had visited a stillhouse in the neighborhood together some time ago, and when both were under the influence of drink had gotten into a difficulty and had not been getting along well since.

They are neighbors, Taylor having bought a passway to a public highway through Graves' place. The passway was twelve feet wide, running along the side of a field and had not been fenced, and it is claimed that when Graves plowed the field he encroached on this passway and plowed some of it up, which added to the trouble above mentioned.

LEN WITMER of Augusta is unlucky. For eight years he had carried insurance on his house. The policy expired April 30d. A few days ago fire damaged him about $800.

REMEMBER, THE LEDGER prints "Help Wanted," "Lost," "Found," and similar notices not of a business character, free of charge. The only thing we require is that the copy be sent in before 9 o'clock on day of publication.

HENRY DERICH and John C. Dinger will leave Maysville on Monday, May 23rd, and after spending a few days in Baltimore and New York, will sail from the latter place for Europe on Saturday the 29th, going by the North German Lloyd route.

MRS. JOHN LEONARD died this morning at 6:30 o'clock at her home on East Fourth street from dropsy. She had been an intense sufferer since early in the winter. Deceased was about 62 years of age and was a sister of Mrs. John A. Shea. Three children survive her—two sons, Edward and John, and one daughter, Mary. She was born in county Cork, Ireland, but came to this county at an early age. The funeral will take place from St. Patrick's Church to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Deaths of Douglas January.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Horace January will be pained to hear of the death of their youngest child, Robert Douglas January, which occurred at fifteen minutes past 10 o'clock last night. He was taken ill about two weeks ago, and his complaint developed into diphtheria. "Douglas," as he was familiarly known, was a very much loved child, being of a sunny disposition and possessing remarkable intelligence for one of his age. He was 9 years old on the 7th of last November. The funeral will take place at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning from the residence on Front street.

Senator Voorhees Opens the Memphis Bridge With an Address.

Twenty Thousand People Witness the Ceremonies—A Parade of Three Hundred Wagonettes and Procession of Illuminated Floats at Night.

Memphis, Tenn., May 12.—Tennessee is no longer separated from Arkansas by 900 yards of a turbid, swift-rolling flood. The two states have clasped hands over the muddy chaos in the person of their governors, who met in the center of the great bridge for the purpose in the presence of 20,000 people. The two executives were each escorted by an artillery company, locomotives, and left their own territory for the neutral point in the middle of the great structure precisely at noon.

The famous observance of the governor of South Carolina was not repeated on this occasion. Gov. Eagle, of Arkansas, is a wet-sleeper.

The multitude welcomed the two governors back to the Tennessee shore with rock-throwing and a shower of bricks. The crowd trooped their whistles, and the Concord, dressed in her Sunday clothes, fired a national salute, which was received by artillery on both sides. Many distinguished guests were present.

Senator Voorhees, the orator of the day, was introduced by G. C. Matthews, editor of the Appeal-Recorder. The "Tail Sycamore" was received with tremendous cheering, and was frequently interrupted with applause during the delivery of his address, in which he dwelt upon the wisdom of Jefferson in acquiring the Louisiana territory, the growth of the south, its hopes and kindred topics.

Thursday night there was a parade of whoremasters, with 300 riders in line, and a pageant of illuminated floats, representing different epochs in the history of the city.

IN HOC SIGNO VINCES.

THE alleged antagonism of interest between farmers and manufacturers is a favorite hobby with those whose partiality for foreign trade leads them to advocate privileges for outsiders that are necessarily beyond reach of citizens in this country. The rapid increase of urban populations disclosed by our late census has been seized upon as corroborating evidence, and made to do duty in disparaging the policy of Protection for those home industries without which large non-agricultural communities could not be sustained.

By some peculiarity of logic never yet made plain, farmers are urged to discourage aggregations of population in this country as inimical to their property, which they are asked to believe will be enhanced by building up the population and trade of foreign cities, to the detriment of those nearer home.

It would seem that no voter with intelligence enough to be a good farmer could be deceived by such a claim. He needs but to glance at official statistics to find that more than three-fourths of all the grains and meats he sells are taken and paid for by these very people whom he is asked to believe are the chief impediments to his greater prosperity. He has but to draw upon individual experience for proof that many products of his farm that could not by any possibility be gotten into a remote market find ready buyers in such towns as are within reach, and command all the better prices by reason of their perishable nature.

Such facts, within the observation of every man who cares to look at them, point to a conclusion diametrically opposite to that urged by the advocates of free foreign trade. The farmer must have a market for his surplus crops, or he must discontinue raising more than can be consumed at home. Prices for what goes upon the market are so largely determined by the trade law of demand and supply that his interest necessarily lies in having the largest possible number of buyers of such crops as he has to sell, with as few competitors as may be in supplying the existing demand.

Evidently, then, if by legislation or from other cause the millions who are now engaged in some work other than farming should be thrown out of employment, or have their income materially reduced by foreign competition, many of them would probably resort to farming (free-traders say that is what they ought to be doing now) or at best their ability to buy what farmers have to sell would be seriously impaired. Hence, it follows that no other class of voters have equal interest with farmers in adding to the number of factories and keeping the contingent of buyers of agricultural products at the highest attainable point of efficiency for purchase and consumption.

These Democrats were awfully anxious for a "look at the books" at Washington; yet it is curious how they oppose a "look at the books" at Frankfurt.

If free coinage should send American gold to Europe the expansion in the volume of money there would cause a rise of prices and cotton would sell higher. Free coinage, while poison to the North, it is thought would be meat to the Cotton States.

MR. REED of Maine has presented the report of the minority of the Ways and Means Committee opposing the passage of the bill to admit silver lead ore free of duty. The minority says that the majority advise the abolition of the duties, because the American miner needs this ore to smelt his own with. The American miner, it is asserted, is not back of the British, but the American Free-trader, yearning not for free raw material, but the rawest kind of Mexican fifty cents a day labor.

Colonel John B. Thompson of Harrodsburg has withdrawn from the race for election to the Eleventh District to the National Democratic Convention. He declares that the District is overwhelmingly for Cleveland, and that, as he is opposed to that candidate, he could not consistently carry out the wishes of the people.

Certainly You've Met This Man.
Pseudonym Spirit—You have met a dry goods store statesman, the sage who sits around all day solving problems of political economy, but who is scarcely able to solve the problem of where the next sack of flour is to come from. You are acquainted with the philosopher who never read or studied anything, but who knows everything by intuition—the gentleman who has general supervision over all things, who is a mine of information that doesn't inform, and a cyclopedia of misstatements. To be sure you have. Every community has a representative or two of this type. And really it is difficult to see how we could get along without these breezy and amusing fellows.

Over on Free Silver.

"It is What number?"
"Connect me with the Hon. Grover Cleveland a law office, please."

"Yes, sir. What will you have?"
"Mr. Cleveland, what is your present position on the silver question?"
"I will be frank with you. I regard the American Public School system as the best in the world."
"But about free silver, Mr. Cleveland. Have you any views to make public?"
"Certainly, sir. I have always been a friend of the Public Schools."
"That is all you have to say on the silver question to day, is it, Mr. Cleveland?"
"I could say more, but I think my simple endorsement of the Public Schools will carry great weight. Why, sir, the Public Schools of America are the hope of the Nation."
"Are you in favor of the free coinage of silver?"
"I am in favor of the Public Schools with all my heart, sir. I get myself down fearfully on that platform, and will defend it against all assaults. Good morning, sir."
"Good morning, Mr. Cleveland. Many thanks for your information."
"Not at all. Good morning."

Colonel John B. Thompson of Harrodsburg has withdrawn from the race for election to the Eleventh District to the National Democratic Convention. He declares that the District is overwhelmingly for Cleveland, and that, as he is opposed to that candidate, he could not consistently carry out the wishes of the people.

Certainly You've Met This Man.
Pseudonym Spirit—You have met a dry goods store statesman, the sage who sits around all day solving problems of political economy, but who is scarcely able to solve the problem of where the next sack of flour is to come from. You are acquainted with the philosopher who never read or studied anything, but who knows everything by intuition—the gentleman who has general supervision over all things, who is a mine of information that doesn't inform, and a cyclopedia of misstatements. To be sure you have. Every community has a representative or two of this type. And really it is difficult to see how we could get along without these breezy and amusing fellows.

LOUD-VOICED.

The Long-Power Developed by People in Certain Sections.

Life in the country, says Dr. J. Hauvie Dew in the Century, especially in our southern country, where people lived far apart and were employed occasionally as a considerable distance from one another, and from the houses or homes in which they ate and slept, tended, by exercise in communicating with one another, to strengthen and improve their voices for high and prolonged notes. A wider range to the vocal sounds was constantly afforded and frequently required.

The voices of women as well as of men were often utilized for "long-distance calls." It may be amusing to note the difference in intonation which was usually exhibited by the sexes. When a man had occasion to summon anyone from a distance, the prolonged tone was placed on the first note, the emphasis on the second, thus: "O—h, John!" If a female called, the prolonged tone and the emphasis were both placed on the last note, thus: "You John—y!"

Following, screaming, yelling for one person or another, to this day, or at some of the cattle on the plantation, with the accompanying reverberations from hillsides, over valleys and plains, these familiar sounds throughout the farming districts of the south in the days gone by. It used to be said of my father's old negro foreman that he could be distinctly understood for a mile or more away.

Hunting, which was enjoyed and indulged in more or less by nearly every citizen of the south, was also conducive to this characteristic development.

A DOCTOR'S FEE.

How a Physician Proposed an Exchange of Services.

To the lover of dumb animals it seems rather extraordinary that physicians should object to prescribing for a four-footed sufferer. Some of them, however, do feel "above it," and either refuse altogether, or perform the service under peculiar protest. The Mail Mail Budget tells the story of a French doctor and a painter's wife. The doctor's name does not appear, but the painter was Melssemer. One day Mme. Melssemer sent for the family physician, and he hurried to the home, thinking some illness had overtaken the artist. It was not the man of the house, however; it was only the lap dog.

The doctor poked his pride and most zealously attended the patient, who soon recovered. As the end of the year he sent in his bill, but among the items there was none for attendance on a dog. Mme. Melssemer noticed the omission, and called the physician's attention to it.

"You must charge for that, also," said she. "I insist upon it."

"By no means," was the reply. "I am not a veterinary surgeon. I was very glad to do the dog a service, but really I can't be paid for it."

"But I insist upon it," said the lady. "Well, then," returned the doctor, "as the hinges of my gate are some what rusty, Melssemer may bring his brush and paint them for me."

But as every grain of paint from Melssemer's brush was worth more than its weight in gold, the hint was probably not taken.

HE LOOKED IT.

The Novel Idea of a Man Who Used to Keep His Umbrella.

A prominent young club man of this city, who is noted for his fastidious tastes, says the Philadelphia Press, was exhibiting a costly, gold-mounted, hand-drawn umbrella, which was ingeniously fastened with a tiny silver padlock, to a number of friends, with the remark:

"If it had not been for this locking device I would have lost this valuable umbrella long ago. Picking up the wrong umbrella on a rainy day is as sure as the sun in the sky. I have seen your neighbor's lead pencil and returning it back to your own pocket. To tell this question to my full satisfaction I strode into the lobby of a well-known hotel one wet, stormy day, and, snapping the little lock through the wire spring under the folds of the umbrella, I placed it in a prominent rack among a number of others. On looking over a morning newspaper I pretended to be deeply interested in its columns. I had hardly turned my eye when a respectfully dressed gentleman picked up my umbrella and off he went. It was raining in torrents, he couldn't open it, and in a moment or two he returned, ramming it back and muttering something about a 'mistake,' took another one from the rack, and was gone for good. You may not believe me, but for one hour that umbrella came and went every five minutes, men, women and children, old and young, grave and gay. The performance was kept up until it tired me out. I took charge of it finally and snatched off home."

Had a Million Feeling.

In a restaurant down at McLanahan the other night, says the Mount Carmel (Ill.) Register, a party of young fellows were sitting and standing around the table waiting for the waiter to bring the night Louisville and Nashville train to come in. One of the gang had been out the night before with his best girl, and was exceedingly deep. Stretching himself in a chair he was soon in the land of Nod, the upper half of his head unbuttoned, and his back, and his mouth so wide open that he resembled the entrance to the Patton tunnel. The boys passed on him in silence for a few moments, then one of them slipped out to a drug store, from which he soon returned with a small pill of anesthetic, which he deftly placed upon the sleeper's tongue. "There was one of the mouth dissolved the drug in a few seconds and the snorer awoke, stretching, yawned and yawning like a cherry tree laden with a prodigious crop of Pinkie cherry chills. "Boys," said the victim, "I never if I ain't as bilious as a post!" I never in my whole life had such a morning as this."

"Good morning, Mr. Cleveland. Many thanks for your information."

"Not at all. Good morning."

A special from Lexington says a tremendous sensation was produced there when three hundred people went to the First Baptist Church to witness the wedding of Rodney Dillon, the young individual bookkeeper of the National Exchange Bank, and Miss Emma Carpenter, daughter of Ben P. Carpenter, individual bookkeeper of the Fayette National Bank, and granddaughter of Rev. W. H. Polk, Pastor of the church, was planned on the church door the announcement "wedding postponed." The reason for the sudden postponement was not given. It seems that the National Exchange Bank is the Treasurer of the Ashland Building and Loan Association, and that $900 of the Association's money that was placed in a box in the bank's safe last Thursday night is missing.

The officers of the Association declare the missing money was placed in the bank's hands, and this being admitted, the entire loss of employees of the bank that had access to the safe are naturally looked upon with suspicion. Realizing the unfortunate position he would be placed in when the Building Association began making its investigation, and being willing to cast any dishonor on the name of his bride, Mr. Dillon told her father that he would postpone the wedding until a full and searching investigation could be made, as he felt that he would be believed of all suspicion, and that his good name would be cleared.

Miss Carpenter is nearly heartbroken over the event, but she still maintains the stoutest faith in her lover. Young Dillon has been with the bank five years, and has worked up from the position of messenger to the responsible one he now holds. He is a member in good standing of the First Baptist Church, and none of his hundreds of friends believe he is in any way responsible for the loss of the Building Association money.

The Building Association's money was placed in the open vault, not in the inner time-locked safe, and had not been turned over to the bank by the Secretary of the Association.

Mr. Mary Rose of Sherrburne, who recently fell in the fire and was severely burned during a fire, died from her injuries.

"CHARACTER SKETCHES, or the Black-board Mirror," is a veritable museum of character. It has its place at the foundation of things. It is a real character builder. The great multitude will read, laugh, grow fatter, happier and wiser while they read it. In "Character Sketches" Dr. Lofton had turned the laugh on the devil. Buy a copy and put it on a low shelf where the children can get it. They will wear it out—but never mind that; before they get through with it they will have the seed truths of noble lives in them. Mr. A. N. Reeder of Louisville will canvas this for Mayville for the work. He comes to us highly recommended by Judge Hoke, Judge Jackson, Mayor Tyler and other leading citizens of Louisville.
